The Graduate Students Association (GSA) was established due to the constant need for representation of graduate students and the promotion of graduate students' interests on this campus and within the University of California. Due to the nature of graduate study, GSA does not unduly burden the individual graduate student who would like to participate and will answer to the students of different academic disciplines. Furthermore, reasonable procedures guarantee the fair and responsible representation of all graduate students. GSA is one of the four component bodies that go to make up Associated Students UCLA (ASUCLA), an unincorporated, non-profit California association founded in 1919.
