To ensure equal opportunity and equal access in our society, and to benefit from our diversity, it makes sense to understand the historical human and social circumstances of our diversity. A requirement of this kind, therefore, will be a boon to our academic programs and to our community in its efforts to be inclusive, prevent conflict and enhance cooperation.

Sincerely,

Efrain Kristal
Professor and Chair
Department of Comparative Literature